*Who of you by worrying can add a single hour to his life?
Matthew 6:27*

Worrying can be like a comfortable, but toxic relationship. It feels safe, it feels familiar, and most importantly worry gives us the illusion of control. Worry tells us we can foresee outcomes and steer them in the right direction. Worry tells you "let up" and relax something bad will happen...and it will be your fault.

Strangely enough, worry can be an addictive, comforting process, that we hate and feel we need ... all at the same time. The foundation of worry is believing that you are alone. Worry can only survive in the presence of fears that are indulged and utterly believed.

Father, I have no control of outcomes, but I will celebrate that You do! You know the beginning and the end of all things and I release them to You!
